

What do you get when you combine a COMEDIAN with a CONFLICT MANAGER?

No, it's not the punchline to an old joke, it's Barb North, and an ENTERTAINING way to Resolve Conflict. She will teach your listeners how to resolve conflict and laugh at the same time. To quote Barb: "Communication is the key... making 'I' Statements... and amazingly enough, 'I think YOU are a Jerk' is not an 'I' Statement."

Learn: • How to help your partner understand that he really is a jerk. • How to get an apology from the mother-in-law you've been battling for years. • How to get your coworkers feet off your desk • The four choices you have to resolve personal conflict... and what style suits you.

Barb has a comedy/show biz background. She was Head Writer of the late 80's rendition of The Gong Show and wrote or produced for many others including Candid Camera, Make Me Laugh, Bachelor Party and Switcheroo. Ms. North is also a certified mediator and conflict management/communication trainer and has been seen on several television shows including The Other Half and Conflict Line.

'I've got issues people!'

Why the entire world is against comedian Jay Hewlett, and why it's so funny

Jay Hewlett has issues. He does everything right and yet stuff happens to him. He figures it must be a conspiracy. Like the time he didn't pay his phone bill. He got letters like, "Perhaps you forgot. " "Maybe it slipped your mind." He wrote back: Nope, no freakin' money. They canceled my credit cards. How do you expect me to pay my phone bill?" See, stuff happens to him. "And I don't get it," says Jay. "I work hard to achieve so little."

Jay's comedy / acting career is on a rocket. You've seen him on Comedy Central, Saved by the Bell, Hang Time, and BET's Comic View. He is also a series regular as Jay the postman on the syndicated comedy Food Rules. His new comedy CD is entitled, Nice Shirt Day.

Even with a Masters degree in Behavioral Science Jay still hasn't learned how to behave. Like the time he showed up at a postal worker family picnic in a thong bikini. He offended everyone. His response, "No one told me you had to wear it the other way around".

More Nuclear Plants, More Cases of Lung Cancer

Why Bush's Energy Plan Is Toxic to America

No nuclear power plants have been ordered in America since the 1970s. The 2005 Bush Energy Plan authorizes the building of new nuclear power plants despite a recent ABC-Washington Post poll showing 64% of Americans are against this.

Each of 103 U.S. nuclear power plants produce 400 to 1,000 pounds of plutonium per year. One teaspoon of plutonium can cause 6 million lung cancers.

"Is the Bush science/political team ignorant of plutonium's toxicity? Or don't they care?" asks author Conrad Miller M.D. Dr. Miller warns that twenty pounds of plutonium is enough to make a terrorist atom bomb AND possibly cause cancer in every human on Earth.

Dr. Miller says the complications of nuclear waste disposal are hitting closer to home. Radioactive materials are quietly being de-monitored, possibly ending up in our baby strollers, batteries, zippers, forks and other consumer products.

Other hot button issues Dr. Miller is qualified to discuss include:

- What you need to know about the cancer-threat from foods you eat — irradiated foods, genetically-altered potatoes, soy beans, corn, cotton, canola, to "farmed" fish.
- How utilities have shifted the responsibility for multi-billion dollar nuclear accidents to the taxpayer through the Price-Anderson Act.

CREDENTIALS: Conrad Miller M.D., is a physician, political observer and activist for the measured use of technologies and policies that can advance, rather than destroy and pollute, our civilization. He was a radio and television host for 25 years and produced numerous programs. Dr. Miller is the author of THE MOST IMPORTANT ISSUES AMERICANS THINK THEY KNOW ENOUGH ABOUT to inform people so they can make wiser choices.
